SOLDIER VOTE TO DECIDE NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTION

Wilson Now Has a Lead of 93 Votes on the Face of Complete Returns From the State, But There Are 1,300 National Guardsmen in Texas to be Counted.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 9.—Latest returns from New Hampshire this noon indicated that the state had gone for Wilson by 93 votes. The statement that complete returns at the office of Secretary of State Bean showed a Hughes victory by 161 votes was exploded today when Secretary Bean admitted that 125 towns were still to be tabulated.

Secretary Bean, a Republican of Concord, said at 10:30:

"Returns from seventy-five towns came in this morning. These returns are now being tabulated. Returns from fifty more towns are still to be received. This makes a total of 125 towns to be tabulated. I hope to be able to make an official statement soon."

Unofficial tabulation of these towns show Wilson carried the state by 93 votes.

The Concord Patriot announced at 10:30 o'clock today that returns, official and unofficial, from the whole state, with no towns missing showed Wilson carried the state by 93 votes.

New York, Nov. 9.—The Republican secretary of state of New Hampshire today officially notified Republican national headquarters that the complete compilation of the votes of that state gives New Hampshire to President Wilson by 93 votes.

The Republican managers immediately transferred the state on their list of claimed states from the Hughes to the Wilson column.

New York, Nov. 9.—George W. Perkins at Republican headquarters at 10:20 today said that he had received a telegram from Republican officials in New Hampshire saying that an error in the tabulation of the state's vote had been discovered which, when corrected, gave President Wilson an apparent plurality of 93 votes in that state.

Mr. Perkins declined to admit that this would give the president the electoral vote of New Hampshire. "We are making no such concessions," he said.

"It was already certain that if the final count of secretary of state gives the plurality to Wilson and Republican national committee will demand a recount of the ballots in that state."

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 9.—The Union, leading Republican paper of New Hampshire, received a dispatch from the state house representative today saying complete official returns in New Hampshire give the state to Woodrow Wilson by 93 votes. The say tabulations in the secretary of state's office completed this forenoon showed that Wilson had overturned Charles Evans Hughes's lead of the earlier reports and had carried the state by 93 votes. There is sure to be a recount in this state.

New Hampshire has more than 1,300 National Guardsmen in Texas and it is evident their votes are not included in the count. The soldier vote will decide the election and will probably overcome the apparent Wilson lead.

Hughes Leads in Minnesota.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 9.—Hughes gained 88 votes on Wilson in the count from seven precincts which first reported today. The figures were: Wilson, 162,911; Hughes, 163,911, giving Hughes a lead of exactly 1,000, at 10 o'clock today, with 505 precincts yet to be heard from. An hour later Hughes's lead was cut to 805 when the vote from 2,334 precincts had been counted. The figures then stood: Hughes, 164,764; Wilson, 163,959, with 490 precincts yet to be heard from.

Columbian Disregarded Signal.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Madrid, Nov. 9.—The American steamship Columbia, which was shelled by a German submarine yesterday off the Portuguese coast, was attacked after she had disregarded a signal to stop, it is stated in a dispatch here today from the seaboard. The Columbia is believed to have escaped. The ship, which was on her way to Genoa, carried no passengers, but there were a number of American horse tenders aboard.

Hughes Gains in New Mexico.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 9.—New Mexico swung into the Hughes column early today when the count of 336 precincts out of 638 in the state gave Wilson 14,536; Hughes, 14,734, a lead for Hughes of 238 votes.

SENATE DEMOCRATIC HOUSE IN DOUBT

Various Kinds of Independents May Hold Balance of Power in the Lower House of Congress—Democratic Majority of 12 in Senate.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 9.—Control of the house of representatives still was in doubt today. The outstanding factor was that the Democratic majority of 21 in the last house practically has been wiped out. The latest returns available here today indicated that the next house would be made up of the following:

Democrats—213.
Republicans—215.
Prohibitionists—1.
Protectionists—1.
Independents—1.
Socialists—1.
Doubtful—2.

In the case of the Socialist, Meyer London of New York, re-elected, his Democratic opponent claims that the official figures will defeat London but they will not be available for several days. The doubtful districts are in Pennsylvania and the decision rests on the soldier vote. Representative William H. Colman of McKeesport, Republican, was elected by a majority of 20 in his district and his opponent claims the 20-vote vote will overturn this. Representative A. J. Barchfield, Republican, was defeated by 19 votes and he hopes that the soldier vote will save him.

Although Miss Jeanette Rankin of Montana, Mont., claims to have been elected as the first woman to gain a seat in the national house of representatives, today's returns seem to indicate here defeat by a narrow margin.

Representative Frank Buchanan of Illinois, who was indicted in New York for alleged complicity in a plot to interfere with shipments of munitions of Europe, was defeated. Another victim was Clyde H. Tavenner of Illinois, who led the fight against preparedness in the house. Warren North Bailey of Pennsylvania, a socialist, for whose re-election William Jennings Bryan made several appeals also was beaten. One of the surprises of the contest was the defeat of Representative John J. Casey in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., district which had been considered safely Democratic because of the heavy labor vote there. Today it is reported that Representative Ernest W. Roberts, Republican, and one of the best known members of the house from Massachusetts, has been defeated by A. T. Fuller, an Independent. The loss of Roberts will be serious if the Republicans control the house.

Senate is Democratic.

The United States Senate is safely Democratic. The revised indications today were that it will be made up as follows:

Democrats, 54.
Republicans, 42.
These figures are based upon the apparent success of Senator Gilbert H. Hitchcock in Nebraska, where at first he seemed to have been defeated; A. A. Jones, former assistant secretary of the interior in New Mexico; J. B. Kendrick, Dem., in Wyoming; and Senator Atlee Pomerene in Ohio. Up until early today the returns available indicated that all four had been defeated by Republicans.

The biggest surprise of the senatorial contest was the defeat of Senator Lippitt for re-election by Peter G. Gerry, Dem., which was due to the latter receiving the united support of the labor leaders and of Senator George Sutherland, Republican, in Utah, where the women voters took things into their own hands. The election of William M. Calder, Rep., in New York, served to show his great popularity in that state as he led the nation and state tickets by thousands of votes in showing under completely William F. McCombs, original Wilson man and former chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Although on the face of the returns Senator Chilton has been substantially defeated by his Republican opponent in West Virginia, the Democrats do not concede this and are preparing to carry the contest into the courts and before the senate itself.

It had been freely predicted that organized labor would defeat James E. Watson, Rep., in Indiana, but the returns available here indicate that he ran well up with his team mate, Harry New, and that both senators from the Hoosier state are Republicans.

The defeat of Senator DuPont in Delaware was due to family troubles, members of his family who are on

ELECTION WILL BE DECIDED BY CALIFORNIA AND MINNESOTA

Hughes is Leading in Minnesota and Wilson's Small Lead in California is Decreasing as Southern Part of the State is Heard From—These Two States Would Elect Hughes.

New York, Nov. 9.—California will decide the result of the presidential election. If the Democratic claims that the president has a plurality in that state are true he has been re-elected. If the state's vote goes to Governor Hughes, and he retains his apparent lead in Minnesota, then he will be president.

New Hampshire has gone definitely for President Wilson. The complete count of the votes of the Granite State, completed today, shows that the Democratic electors have a plurality of 93 votes. Republican national headquarters admit this although there was some talk there of asking a recount. The fact, however, that the Republicans control the election machinery of that state, was held to indicate that the Republicans already had received all of the votes they could expect in another canvass.

North Dakota apparently also has gone for Wilson although the Republicans declare they are still hoping.

A telegram from National Committeeman Hiramth from Fargo to Vance McCormick, however, says that Wilson carried the state by 1,253. Adding the votes of New Hampshire and North Dakota to the 251 votes which the Republican national committee in its table at its headquarters conceded to Wilson, the president has 260 votes, or six less than are needed to elect.

The Hughes lead in Minnesota was slowly growing although the election inspectors quit counting for a needed rest.

Although publicly the Democratic managers continued to claim the state, they privately admitted that they feared it would wind up in the Republican column. Hughes was leading but the count was very slow, and his lead was very small.

San Francisco, Nov. 8.—With 510 California precincts yet to be heard from President Wilson's lead over

Charles E. Hughes was only 783 votes at 8 o'clock this morning. The count then stood Wilson 446,818; Hughes 445,531.

At 9:45 a. m. today, with 553 precincts missing, Wilson was leading Hughes by 4,525 votes.

Returns from 5,364 precincts in California out of 5,917 give Wilson 441,362 and Hughes 436,839.

With 109 precincts missing, Los Angeles county has rolled up a plurality of approximately 19,000 for the Republican candidate but the further gains Hughes is expected to make there, Democratic leaders here say, will not be sufficient to offset Wilson's present lead.

Hughes's lead in Sonoma county was materially increased during the night's count.

Further returns from scattering precincts, but principally from the south where Hughes is strongest, have reduced Wilson's lead in California to 3,692. In 5,564 precincts out of 5,917, Hughes has 447,027 and Wilson 450,719. Only 15 precincts remain to be counted in Los Angeles county.

MORE THAN ONE-HALF THE STATES IN "DRY" COLUMN

Prohibition Won in Michigan and Five Other States, Including Florida—Claim Two Congressmen and a Dry Nation in 1920.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Out of the maze of uncertainty and doubt which hangs like a pall over the political situation of the nation one feature, monumental in its proportions, stood out in bold relief today. It was this:

More than one-half the states of the country are dry—or will be just as soon as Prohibition laws and officials elected on Tuesday can enact it. Theoretically more than 75 per cent of the United States has banned the sale of alcoholic liquors under the cloak of legality.

Whatever the result in the presidential muddle, Tuesday, November 7, 1916, saw the greatest victory for Prohibition in history despite the fact that J. Frank Hanly, the dry presidential candidate, was literally snowed under. Six states went over to the dry ranks—Michigan, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, Utah and Florida. The latter pair did not vote directly on the question, but the issue was between dry and wet candidates and the dry won overwhelmingly.

The victory places 25 states positively in the dry column—Maine, Kansas, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Tennessee, West Virginia, Colorado, Virginia, Arizona, Washington, Oregon, Alabama, Arkansas, Iowa, Idaho, South Carolina, Michigan, Nebraska, South Dakota, Utah, Florida, Montana. Add to these the territory of Alaska, which voted Tuesday to our saloons.

The majority rolled up for Prohibition in the six states were so decisive as to permit of no other interpretation than that the nation is saloonless-bound and will arrive in 1920, Prohibition leaders said today. They are jubilant.

"We regard the backbone of the liquor traffic broken by Tuesday's results," said Virgil C. Hinshaw, chairman of the Prohibition national committee, today. "Victory for nationwide prohibition is assured in 1920."

Only two of the states which voted on the liquor question were in doubt today. They are California and Missouri. Wet forces claim each of these states, and today it seemed probable their claims will be borne out by facts and figures, although the latter are not available at this time.

In addition to winning six states, the Prohibitionists also elected Charles E. Randall to congress from the 9th California district, and are claiming the election of Atwood from the 11th district of the same state, and many state senators and representatives scattered broadcast the country.

The Prohibitionists regard Michigan as their greatest victory. "They have said," declared Chairman Hinshaw, "that we never could win a great industrial state. Michigan is one of the greatest industrial states in the country. There can be but one answer to this. It is this: National-wide prohibition is on the way, and its arrival is scheduled for 1920."

Republicans claim Hughes will get from 1,300 to 1,400 of the votes of 2,000 Minnesota militiamen on the border.

Slump in Minnesota.

St. Paul, Nov. 9.—Hughes's lead in Minnesota had been cut to 307 at 11:49 o'clock. The figures then stood: Hughes 169,433; Wilson, 169,126, with 2,660 precincts heard from out of 3,924.

Hughes Recovers Lead.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 9.—At 12:30 o'clock today Hughes was leading President Wilson in Minnesota by 811 votes with 314 precincts yet to be heard from. The figures are: Hughes 172,308; Wilson 171,497.

Another Hughes Slump.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 9.—(Hughes was leading by only 511 votes at 1 o'clock on the returns from 2,784 precincts out of 3,024 in the state. With 266 precincts to hear from the figures were: Hughes, 173,240; Wilson, 172,723.

Oregon Safe for Hughes.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 9.—Returns from every county in Oregon except one give Hughes a lead of 7,272. Figures were Hughes, 106,898; Wilson, 99,626.

LOCAL LEADER SCATTERS COIN

Well Known Democratic Leader Distributes Five Hundred Pennies on Lower Broadway to Horde of Children.

One of the leaders of the local Democratic party has long been noted for the bigness of his heart and the way in which he looks after his constituents, and after hearing some of the election results at the Democratic headquarters on Wednesday afternoon he became so elated thinking Wilson won that he hurried downtown and with his pockets crammed with pennies, estimated at fully five hundred, began to scatter handfuls of coppers on the brick pavement.

News that a prominent Democrat was throwing away pennies for the children to dive for began to spread rapidly, and suddenly hordes of children began pressing toward the scene from the Strand, lower Broadway, Meadow street, Ann street, Union street, Chambers street, and other streets in the lower section of the city. It was even said that a large delegation of kids had started from uptown but turned back when they were informed the flow of money had suddenly stopped.

By this time lower Broadway was jammed with kids estimated as being fully as many as the pennies being thrown away by the genial politician, and it was a sight worth traveling far to see, children of all ages, sizes, colors and creed, shoving, pushing, bumping, punching and plunging for the pennies.

Even traffic was held up by the tremendous crowd of children as following the money scattering episode they all began to sing, led by the politician waving a large flag. Just what they sang is in doubt, but they made some noise.

Finally as traffic was being blocked the two policemen on the downtown beat hurried to the scene and dispersed the crowd.

What happened next is still in doubt.

WILSON PROBABLY CARRIES CALIFORNIA

This Elects Him, Unless There Are Radical and Unexpected Changes in Returns From Other States That Are in Doubt.

New York, Nov. 9.—That Presi-

Y. M. C. A. WOMEN WILL CONTRIBUTE

Regular Meeting on Friday to be Occasion for Donations to Take Place of Annual Fair—Reception for Secretary and Mrs. Thornberry.

The ladies of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary are again reminded that Friday, November 10, is their regular meeting day and Mrs. Weeks, the president, wishes to thank the members for their loyalty in the past years, and the splendid efforts which they have always put forth in assisting and carrying on the work of the auxiliary. It has been customary almost every year to hold a fair in order to replenish the funds of the treasury, but in consideration of the fact that this calls for much time and labor, it has been decided this year to ask every member to give in money whatever sum they feel that they can give.

At the regular meeting on Friday, there will be a roll call of membership, and the contributions will be given in response, and as an incentive as it were to others, one member has made the following proposition. In response to roll call, she will give $10, and if $100 are given by the other members she will give another $10, and if $200 are given she will give $5 more.

At the close of the business meeting, an informal reception will be tendered the new secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Thornberry, who will be the guests of honor.

A very interesting program of entertainment has been arranged for the occasion and refreshments will be served. Every member is urged to make a special effort to be at the meeting and help to make November 10 a red letter day in the calendar of the auxiliary.

Just remember that this will take the place of the annual fair without the work to do. Just to have a good time and to be entertained Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Japan Leads in China.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Washington, Nov. 9.—Japan now holds the premier place as a seller of goods to China, now that Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Canada, French Indo-China, Germany, European Russia and Switzerland have almost disappeared from the field because of the war, according to reports received here today from American officials. The United States has advanced to second position of importance in China's direct import trade.

The Tongue and Typhus.

According to P. Superlative Good Thing.

It is a good thing to be rich, and a good thing to be strong, but it is a better thing to be beloved of many friends.—Epigram.

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"Well I see by The Freeman that a lot of women got stung sending ten cent pieces to a western concern expecting to get $4.50 silk petticoats," said the friend to the street corner politician.

"Yep, but you should bear in mind that human nature is queer," responded the politician.

"Now so?" said the friend.

"Why I can insert an 'ad' in a paper stating that I will tell you how to sleep nights, and I bet I get so many answers enclosing any price I ask that I will be kept busy just opening letters and removing the cash," said the politician with a chuckle.

"Yes but what would you tell them," asked the friend.

"To undress and get in bed," replied the politician grinning.

"Now you take the old picture game that is worked in Kingston every so often," continued the politician as he lit a cigar "the picture agent comes around to the house and asks if you have any small photos of some beloved one that would like to have enlarged. He puts up the proposition that he will enlarge the photo free of charge just as an advertisement."

"Yes, and what then," said the friend.

"Well by and by he comes around with the photo enlarged and placed in a gilt frame," replied the politician "but before you have to pay a certain price for the frame."

"And if you don't want the frame?" queried the friend.

"Well if you don't take the frame you don't get the enlarged photo and they also refuse to give you back the original small photo, and it is likely to be the only one you have," replied the politician.

"Well what can you do about it," asked the friend.

"That is a question," replied the politician "but the chances are nine out of ten people accept the frame and enlarged photo and pay the price without putting up a kick."

"Well then they are wise to the scheme and are more careful in the future," said the friend.

"Not so you can notice it," responded the politician.

"What can any one do to overcome falling for such schemes then?" asked the friend.

"The only plan I think of," replied the politician "is to make it a point never to do business with a stranger. Insist to your family never to order an enlarged photo or subscribe to anything where you get something for nothing."

"Well some times they have such a good proposition to put up to you" argued the friend.

"That might be so but you should not forget that you can get whatever you need in the local stores and in case you are not satisfied you can always get satisfaction," replied the politician.

"How do you make that out," asked the friend.

"Our local merchants are here to stay, and they know that only by getting the trade can they succeed in business," replied the politician.

"Then you believe in that slogan 'Do Your Trading at Home,'" said the friend.

"I surely do," replied the politician.

The wounds of conscience, like other wounds, though generally received in public, must always be healed in private.—Bishop Atterbury.

The KITCHEN CABINET

So much to do that is not even begun. So much to hope for that we cannot see. So much to win, so many things to be.—William Morris.

COMMON DISHES.

Where the flavor of vegetables like onions, cabbage, turnips or cauliflower are enjoyed, many good combinations may be served of these everyday foods.

Onions au Gratin.—Break six small onions in pieces, but do not chop them. Grate two ounces of cheese and have ready one cupful of seasoned sauce. Butter a casserole and put into it a layer of onion, then of cheese, then some white sauce and more onion, until the dish is full. Sprinkle browned crumbs over the top, dot with butter and bake in the oven until well browned. Serve from the dish in which it is baked.

Cabbage With Sausages.—Cut a cabbage into fine shreds, wash and drain well. Put it into a saucepan with boiling water to cover; add a little salt and cook until it is tender. Prick a pound of sausages and fry until brown on all sides. Then add them to the cabbage with salt and pepper to taste and cook 15 minutes, adding butter if needed to season. Serve hot.

Sweet Potato Souffle.—Take five good-sized sweet potatoes. When done, remove the potato and mash with a smooth. Beat the yolks of three eggs; add two tablespoonsful of milk, the potato, salt, pepper and paprika to taste, then place the dish in the oven while the egg whites are beaten stiff. Fold in the whites of the eggs, replace in oven and bake until delicately browned. Serve hot.

Puree of Cauliflower.—Soak two cauliflowers an hour before cooking in a little salted water. Boil until tender, lift out and drain. Melt two tablespoonsful of butter in a saucepan, stir in one tablespoonful of flour; add three tablespoonsful of white stock, two tablespoonsful of cream, a few drops of lemon juice, salt, pepper and red pepper to taste; add the cauliflower and mix well, rub the whole through a sieve, reheat and serve garnished with croquettes.

When first using a casserole it should be heated very slowly to temper it. A good method is to put it into a pan of cold water and slowly bring it to the boiling point.

STORING FOODS.

Hints How to Keep Vegetables Fresh All Winter.

EXPERT GIVES THIS ADVICE.

Most House Cellars May Be So Manipulated That They Give Good Storage to the Commonest Tubers—Just How to Make the Pit.

There are three important considerations in connection with the placing of vegetables in storage. The vegetables themselves should be of good quality, free from disease or bruises; they must not be put in too early or piled so that any heating will take place, and they must not be subjected to an atmosphere which is so dry that it will cause wilting and thereby spoil their quality. It is possible for the home gardener to keep root crops, potatoes, cabbage and squash for months in most house cellars with the exercise of some precautions, even where a cool cellar is not provided.

Vegetables should be stored as far away from the heater as possible, excepting in cellars where freezing occurs. If there is a cement floor it is best to pack the root crops in boxes or barrels and cover the top with clean sand or sifted soil in which there is not much organic matter. A covering of about two inches is sufficient. In case either the commercial grower or the home gardener lacks a storage place there is an alternative which is available to almost every one who has a garden. This is the vegetable "pit."

The essentials are a well drained piece of land conveniently located and some material to cover the pit after cold weather comes. The crops which can be successfully handled in this way are beets, carrots, parsnips, turnips, winter radishes, cauliflower, horseradish and cabbages. The outdoor vegetable pit is made in the following manner: On the spot selected measure off a space three or four feet wide and as long as desired. Plan to have the pit extend north and south. The soil should be removed eight to twelve inches deep the width of the pit and one-half of the earth thrown out on either side. The bottom of the pit should be made level and the sides cut straight down. The root crops are then piled on the ground the full width of the excavation and brought to a ridge about two and a half feet deep at the center. Rarely will the home gardener need a pit more than four feet long, and it is not a question of mix roots stored so long as a pit can be obtained at one end.

The commercial grower will do well to use the pit for each kind of vegetable stored. The roots should not be piled before the weather is cool. They should be dry and covered with about two inches of soil to prevent frost injury or wilting. As the weather grows colder and gradually after the first soil covering has frozen nearly to the vegetables more covering should be applied to a thickness of two to four inches. It is well to obtain this soil alongside of the pit in such a way that good drainage will be assured. After more cold weather additional covering of straw, meadow hay, leaves or similar good protective material is added.

Renovating an Old Rug.

An excellent method of freshening up an old carpet is to scrub with the following mixture: Shave a pound of good white soap, put into a gallon of boiling water and stir over the fire until completely dissolved. Take from the range and stir well, then leave for half an hour to cool. At the end of that time add half an ounce of sulphuric ether, an ounce of alcohol, two ounces of ammonia, an ounce and a half of powdered borax and let the whole stand for twenty-four hours. Use this for scrubbing, then rinse well with cold water applied with a sponge and rub fairly dry with a rough cloth. This not only cleans the rug, but brightens up the colors.

KEEP A ROAD ENGINEER.

No county that engages in a real road building campaign can afford to dismiss its corps of engineers just as soon as the bulk of the construction work is done. Fact of the matter is the engineer's work is just then well under way. In the matter of maintenance his advice is of the highest importance, for the work of saving what has already been done in a wise manner is certainly as important as to do it wisely. Again, it rarely if ever happens that the initial work is done so wisely but that there are little things that could later be added that would help immensely. In the matter of building roads containing many curves, for instance, it is highly important that these curves be properly banked. It is the hardest sort of a proposition to get this properly done during construction. The outside of these curves is usually a fill, and they may look high enough to the contractor, but they soon settle and become a source of danger to motor traffic. An engineer should be on hand to look after these things as well as a hundred other problems that constantly arise. There are myriad things that should be done and done quickly if roads already built are to do their fullest service. The salary of a good engineer is never thrown away.—Southern Good Roads.

RULES FOR DRAGGING.

Concise Advice From an Authoritative Source.

The following rules are given by the Illinois highway commission:

Use a light drag.
Haul it over the road at an angle so that a small amount of earth is pushed to the center of the road.
Drive the team at a walk.
Ride on the drag; do not walk.
Begin at one side of the road, returning up the opposite side.
Drag the road as soon after every rain as possible, but not when the mud

DRAGGING THE ROAD.

is in such a condition as to stick to the drag.
Do not drag a dry road.
Drag whenever possible at all seasons of the year.

The width of traveled way to be maintained by the drag should be from eighteen to twenty feet. First drag a little more than the width of a single wheel track, then gradually increase until desired width is obtained.

Always drag a little earth toward the center of the road until it is raised from ten to twelve inches above the edges of the traveled way.

The amount of earth that the drag will carry along can be very considerably controlled by the driver, accordingly as he stands near the cutting end or away from it.

When the roads are first dragged after a very muddy spell the wagons should drive, if possible, to one side until the roadway has a chance to freeze or partially dry out.

The best results from dragging are obtained only by repeated application. Removal of that constant attention is necessary to maintain an earth road in its best condition.

Room For Improvement.

There are over 40,000,000 acres of uncultivated land in the United States awaiting development that cannot be developed without improved highways. It has been shown that the value of land is increased greatly with the improvement for the roads, the increase running from $2 to $3 the acre. As the roads are improved there is a corresponding increase in population. In twenty-five counties taken at random which have contained on an average only 1 1/2 per cent of improved roads in the decade 1890 to 1900 there was a falling off in population of 3,000 in each. Undoubtedly the best system of maintenance for all roads is that which provides for the permanent and sometimes continuous employment of skilled laborers who have charge of particular sections of road or who may be assigned to any part of the county or other road unit where there is work most needed.

CASTING A BELL

By F. A. MITCHEL.

One of the fascinating though sad legends of the middle ages is about the casting of St. Mary's bell at Breslau, the capital of Silesia, in 1386. In those days these cathedral bells were only second in importance to the edifice that held them. The composition and casting of one of them were matters of great skill. Many a man was made or marred by his success or failure to make a bell that would produce marvelous tones.

Caspar Ulrich, who had served an apprenticeship at bell casting, was the nephew of the bishop of a cathedral in Brabant and through his uncle's influence obtained an order to cast the big bell that was to be swung in one of the great towers of the church that had been a hundred years in building. Caspar began his work with all the confidence of youth, but as he proceeded it evaporated. He prepared his mold, which must be of exact dimensions. Any deviation from his calculations in the uniformity of space into which the molten metal was to be poured would ruin the bell. The combination of metals was easier, though if his calculations were not correct the result would be unfortunate. But the most dangerous part of the work was the running off of the metal from the crucible into the mold.

By the time Caspar Ulrich came to this last step in the manufacture of the bell he had lost all the confidence with which he had started. The only thing remaining to be done was to turn the stopcock in the bottom of the crucible, giving free egress to the metal fluid. He could not bring himself to take this last step. He sat down on a bench before the embryo bell, rested his elbows on his knees and his chin on his hands and gave himself up to gloomy forebodings.

He was awakened from them by a stranger who had silently entered the building—a man tall and slender, who moved with such a catlike tread that Caspar did not hear it. He was dressed in workman's clothes and wore a leather apron.

"Who are you?" asked Caspar, looking up at him.

"An ironworker. I have made many bells."

"Have you spoiled many?"

To this there was no response except a low chuckle. But the stranger said: "I can make this one a wonder."

"How can you do that?"

"By adding certain metals to those you have already put in."

Caspar produced a paper giving the list of ingredients in the bell and the quantity of each and handed it to the stranger, who glanced at it hastily and said:

"There is not enough iron."

Caspar went over his calculations while the stranger waited and, having done so, said that he feared the criticism was just. Nevertheless he was demoralized and not certain of anything. But the stranger, who was a very aggressive person, took up a crucible of molten iron—for there was melted metal of every kind used in the bell at hand—and was about to pour some of it into the composition when Caspar's young wife, Ursula, entered the foundry. She had come to sympathize with and encourage her husband. Seeing the stranger, she paused and shrank back.

And the stranger shrank back too. Swinging aside the crucible from which he was about to pour the iron, his eyes were fixed on a gold cross that hung from Ursula's neck on her bosom. With cringing step he sidled to the door and went out like a dog with his tail between his legs.

"Who is he," asked Ursula of her husband, "and what was he about to do?"

"Who he is I know not, but he told me that he had made many bells and could make mine a success. After looking at my constituent metals he said I had not sufficient iron and was about to add iron to the mixture when you entered."

"It seems to me, Caspar," said the wife, "that instead of listening to a stranger we should ask the Virgin to tell us if anything is needed."

And, sinking on her knees, she prayed to the Virgin to signify what would add to the melody of the bell. When she had finished her prayer she touched a bar of iron. Then she put her hand on some copper. At once she felt a tingling sensation running up through her arm.

"Put in copper, Caspar," she said.

Caspar poured in a stream of copper. Suddenly his wife called on him to stop. The tinsling in her arm had ceased. She put her hand on other metals with no response till she came to a lump of silver, when the tinsling recommenced. When Ursula called again Caspar ceased to pour the metal, and there being no other metal at hand no more was added.

Then Ursula bade Caspar turn the stopcock, but he declined to do so, telling her to do it herself. She did so, and the metal was soon cooling in the mold.

Caspar told his uncle, the bishop, of the stranger, and the bishop said that he was undoubtedly Satan, who wished to prevent the bell from influencing people to piety with its sweet tones. He would have ruined the mixture but for the entrance of Ursula wearing the cross.

The bell proved a marvel of sweetness and turned many generations from evil to good.

ORGAN RECITAL AT LUTHERAN CHURCH

Harry Sykes to be heard in Kingston
Next Wednesday With the Rev.
Mr. Hassler, Noted Baritone—A Musical Treat.

On Wednesday evening, November 15, the people of Kingston will be given a rare opportunity to hear two splendid artists of exceptional ability.

Mr. Sykes is a Fellow of the American Guild of Organists, Organist and Choirmaster of Trinity Lutheran Church, Morristown, choirmaster, Grace P. E. Church, Philadelphia; conductor Philadelphia.

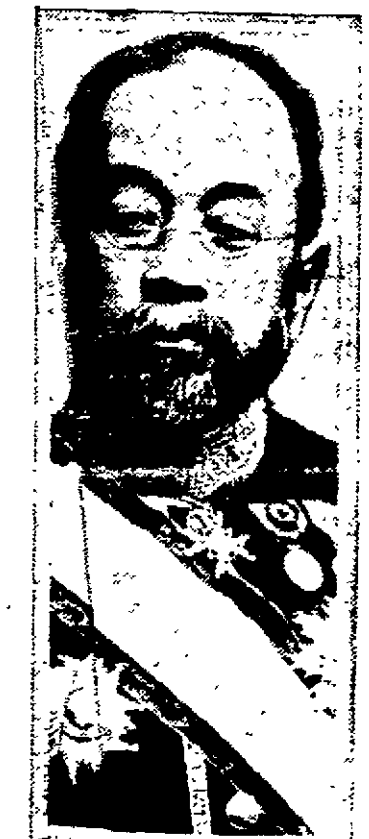

HARRY SYKES.

lowship Club, Morristown (Male voices) and conductor of the Morristown Symphony Orchestra. He has gained an enviable reputation as a master of the pipe organ. Annually he gives recitals on his own organ as well as elsewhere to crowded houses. He is considered one of the leading organists of the younger generation and has been honored with the privilege of giving recitals on one of the largest organs in the country in Wanamaker's store, Philadelphia.

To all lovers of good music, Wednesday evening should find them listening to the masterful performance on the wonderful memorial organ on the Wurts Street Lutheran Church. This organ admits of the greatest possible technique and variation being equipped with a beautiful echo organ and chimes. It is of just such an organ that Mr. Sykes is master. Mr. Sykes is not only an organist, but also a composer. Several of his own numbers with doubtless figure on the program. Nothing but the best may be looked for by the people of Kingston.

The soloist is pastor John Hassler of the Lutheran Church of Elmira, N. Y. Too much cannot be said about this remarkable baritone, who for a number of years was the leading soloist for Frederick Maxon, who is known to be one of the best organists in the city of Philadelphia. Pastor Hassler possesses a powerful voice of unusual range with fine sonant qualities. All who have heard him once are sure to bend every effort to hear him again.

With two such men of attainments to most exacting cannot help but be passed Wednesday evening, November 15 at 8 o'clock in the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, corner of Wurts and Rogers streets. No admission will be charged. Silver offering will be taken.

ULSTER FARMERS TO HEAR
EXPERTS ON AGRICULTURE

Banquet at Stuyvesant a Social Feature of Farm Bureau Sessions Which Will See Wicks Committee at Work—Messrs. Collingwood and Dillon Coming.

All roads will lead to Kingston next Tuesday and Wednesday, the days set for the most important session of the Ulster County Farm Bureau since its organization. Legislative investigators looking for farm facts, expert experimenters from Cornell dispensing information and a representative gathering of farmers ready to absorb the same are assured for these two days. A banquet will be held at the Stuyvesant Hotel on Tuesday night and a poultry show will be held during the meeting and for one day thereafter. The dairy-men may parade at noon of the opening day.

Farm Bureau officials are busy with arrangements of which Manager W. H. Hook is in general charge. The sessions of the bureau will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium. Besides the Cornell contingent, Commissioner Dillon of the State Department of Foods and Markets and Editor Collingwood of the Rural New Yorker, will be speakers.

The poultry show promises to be a big incidental feature and will be held for three days, November 14-16, at Lundy's Garage on Railroad avenue. The date given on the posters was not given correctly.

The program for the two days session at the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium is as follows:

Tuesday, Nov. 14—10 a. m. to 4 p. m., hearing by Wicks Investigating Committee on dairy situation and produce shippers' complaints.

Tuesday—4 to 5 p. m., joint meeting of Ulster County dairymen with Farm Bureau officials.

Tuesday—5:30 p. m., Banquet at Stuyvesant Hotel. Speakers: H. W. Collingwood, Editor Rural New Yorker; John Artmann, Holstein breeder, Middletown; John Y. Gerow, former president of Dairymen's League; W. Y. Velle, president of Hudson River Fruit Growers' Association.

Program For Wednesday.

Wednesday—9 a. m., address by Commissioner John J. Dillon of State Department of Foods and Markets, on "Getting and Holding the Eastern City Markets;" Prof. W. H. Chandler, head of promology department, Cornell, on "Future Fruit Prospects for the Hudson Valley;" and "Recent Findings in Horticulture;" Prof. H. H. Wing, head of Animal Husbandry Department, Cornell, on "The Future Dairying and of Live Stock Production in New York State;" Prof. James E. Rice, on "Advantages of Hudson Valley and Particularly Ulster County for Poultry Husbandry."

It is probable that the election of officers will also be held. Farmers all over the country, whether or not members of the Bureau, and the public as well are invited to attend these sessions which will be immensely profitable to seekers after information as the galaxy of expert talent contained on the program is second to nothing ever offered at any farmers' gathering anywhere in the state.

Guild Supper.

The chapel of the First Reformed Church will be the scene of a very festive occasion Tuesday evening, November 14, that being the night set for the Henrietta Wynkoop Guild supper. A good time and a good supper is assured everyone who attends.

Routine Police Business.

The police board held its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday evening, but only routine business was transacted.

SOCIETY NOTES.

A subscription dance will be held at Pythian Hall Friday evening, November 24, music for which will be furnished by Miller's orchestra.

Mrs. Charles Rommel entertained a number of friends on Wednesday evening with a Victrola concert at her home on East Chester street. Among those who had the pleasure of being present were Mrs. John Krueger, Mrs. Louis Kellerman, Mrs. H. N. Demgen, Mrs. Henry Topp, Mrs. John Wendland, Mrs. Fred Sachoff, Miss Dorothy Demgen. At a late hour a repast was served by the hostess and all present voted their hostess a royal entertainer.

Athlacton Club.

This week the Athlacton Club was entertained by Mrs. Kraft, who had the paper for the day, her subject being "Eugene Brieux, Didactic Dramatist." Next week the club will meet with Miss Margaret Loughran.

Davis-Mones

Miss Ida Mones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Mones of No. 78 Broadway, and Harry Davis of New York city, were united in marriage on Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents by Rabbi Szoulsman of the Congregation Agudas Achim. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. H. Mones of No. 23 Ann street, and Mr. and Mrs. T. Margolis of No. 28 Chambers street. The bride was gown in white and wore a bridal veil. Following a reception attended by the immediate relatives of the contracting parties Mr. and Mrs. Davis left on a honeymoon trip to Washington, D. C. Upon their return they will reside in New York city.

HURLEY.

Hurley, Nov. 9.—Election Day passed off smoothly and quietly, excepting for a few frothy ebullitions of party excitement. In spite of the almost perfect weather conditions, this village cast a rather light vote in comparison with the registration figures. This is rather surprising in view of the very great interest shown in election. Among interesting features of this election was a presidential ballot where the vote had simply voted for one presidential elector. The vote on the propositions was also a very interesting feature. A number of voters whose occupation takes them outside of the village, came home to vote: James Schmidt from Schenectady; Fred Johnston from Shandaken, Levan Smith,

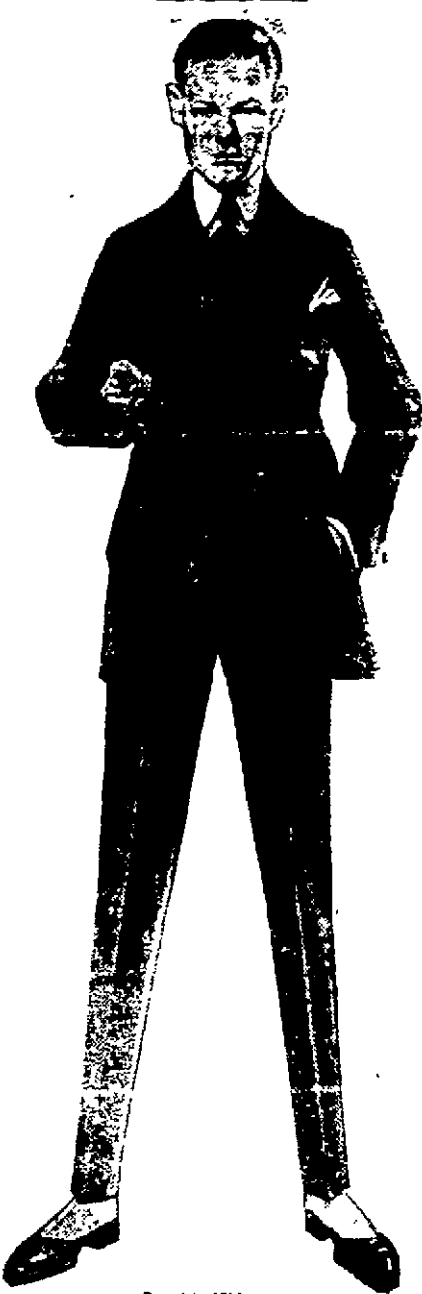

Grape-Nuts Flavor

Grape-Nuts food is probably the most appetizing form in which honest whole wheat is utilized as food.

But to whole wheat is added malted barley in making Grape-Nuts, and the sense of taste quickens at once when a spoonful of the food is eaten with cream. For the barley has a rich, individual taste which, blended with the sweetness of wheat, creates a rare flavor recognized by the palate as unusually new and delicious.

Aside from its wonderfully vitalizing value as a food, Grape-Nuts has a flavor that has made it a favorite everywhere.

Poising on Nothing.

Away up in the air, far beyond the mountain tops, the great condors will hang poised as motionless as if perched on solid rock. True, their wings are outstretched, but even through glasses not the slightest motion is perceptible. They remain in this position for many minutes, sometimes for an hour, making a careful scrutiny of everything below them in their search for prey. Then, with a slight tilting of the wings, they flap slowly away, or, having found what they were seeking, dart like a bullet toward it. The eagle, hawk and other species have this same faculty of poising apparently on nothing.

Curious Water Hole.

A curious form of water hole is found in the deserts of Western Australia, dry by day, but yielding an abundant supply of water by night. The flow of water is preceded by weird hissing and sounds of rushing air. On examining one it was found that the water supply occurred in a long, narrow trench at the bottom of which was a thin plate of grise (a species of rock arranged in layers), separated by a cavity from the sand rockmass beneath. Apparently to heat the day causes this plate to expand in the form of a depression, which the water retreats. When it cools and contracts at night it forces first and then water back into the trench.

BE PLEASANT.

Amid the rust and bustle of life let us take time to be pleasant. The small courtesies, which we often omit because they are small, will some day look large to us than the wealth which we have coveted or the fame for which we have struggled. And it costs nothing to be pleasant.

CITY FATHERS WILL NAME STREET

Aldermen Schick, Shultis and Connolly Appointed a Committee to Name New Street—Other Matters Before City Fathers.

Mayor Canfield sent in a communication on Wednesday evening at the regular meeting of the city fathers relating to property acquired by the city at the tax sale and asking that it be referred to a committee to dispose of the property without loss, if possible to the city. A list of the properties and the amount of tax paid by the city was enclosed. The matter was referred to the committee on finance, ways and means.

Owing to the absence of President Crane the meeting was called to order by City Clerk Cummings and Alderman Connolly was elected temporary chairman. The other aldermen present were Schick, Marquardt, Leverich, Fischer, Parish, Kullman, Shultis, Hull and Purvis. The absentees were Crane, Smith, McKittrick and Brown.

The mayor also sent in a deed to some property which gives the city title to land between Emerick and Stephen streets which will be cut through as a new street to eliminate a railroad crossing. The mayor suggested that if the new street was not to be known as an extension of Emerick street that the city fathers name the street. Alderman Schick, Shultis and Connolly were appointed a committee to seek a name for the street.

Mayor Canfield was empowered to employ Wechsler & Mills to audit the city books. City Treasurer Doremus reported that at the city tax sale August 16, a parcel of land described as being owned by one Thomas Dolphin at 21-23 Manor Place, was sold to A. R. King for $100 and that since the sale Mr. King reported that the certificate given him did not describe the property.

City Assessor Block was conferred with by the city treasurer and stated that the property offered for sale was not owned by Mr. Dolphin who lives at 49-51 Manor Place.

On motion of Alderman Marquardt the city treasurer was authorized to refund Mr. King the purchase price paid by him.

On motion of Alderman Schick the time of collection of school taxes was extended twenty days.

Alderman Shultis moved that the board of public works be requested to place an incandescent light in front of the residence of Mr. Iseman on West O'Reilly street. It was referred to the board of public works.

Other matters brought to the attention of the city fathers will be found in other columns of The Freeman.

The council then adjourned.

SIDESTEP THEATER CHURCH PROBLEM

Laws Committee of City Fathers Fail to Report at Meeting Wednesday—Is the Committee Deadlocked?

Although it was expected that the laws and rules committee of the common council would make its report on the St. John's Church-Cohen's Theater proposition at the regular meeting of the city fathers held on Wednesday evening the committee failed to report.

Another communication from St. John's Church protesting against the erection of the theater was read at the meeting. This communication was printed in full in The Freeman at the time. It was referred to the laws and rules committee by Alderman Connolly who presided in the absence of President Crane.

From what could be learned it would appear that the committee is deadlocked over the proposition, some, it is said, being in favor of allowing the erection of the theater and some opposed. This is not stated, however, as a positive fact.

It will be remembered that some time ago the entire proposition was referred to the committee, who held a public hearing on September 13, at which time after hearing arguments pro and con the committee announced that they would take the matter up with the corporation council and report later.

Several members of St. John's Church were in attendance at the meeting on Wednesday evening.

Whether the committee will make a report at the December meeting can not be stated at this time.

NO INCREASE IN SPEED LIMIT

City Fathers Refuse to Increase Speed Limit in City to 20 Miles an Hour—Adopt Ordinance Laid Over From Last Meeting.

The city fathers went on record on Wednesday at the regular meeting of the common council as opposed to increasing the speed limit in the city from 15 to 20 miles an hour when an ordinance laid over from the last meeting was adopted with every alderman present, except one, voting in favor of it.

Alderman Schick, at whose request the proposed ordinance was laid over until this meeting, called up the ordinance for adoption. The ordinance was read for the benefit of President E. H. Bogart, of the Automobile Club of Ulster county, who was present with Dr. Meinhardt, the secretary of the club. Mr. Bogart extended the privilege of the floor and advocated that the speed limit be increased to 20 miles an hour. He called the attention to the fact that the present speed limit was not enforced, and said the club was in favor of having the law enforced whether the speed limit was 15 miles an hour or more, but that the club was in favor of a reasonable speed limit of 20 miles an hour.

Aldermen Schick and Fischer were not in favor of increasing the speed limit and said so.

Alderman Schick asked for a vote on the proposed ordinance, which did not change the speed limit, and on the roll call Aldermen Schick, Marquardt, Leverich, Fischer, Kullman, Shultis, Connolly, Hull and Purvis voting in the affirmative. Alderman Parish did not vote.

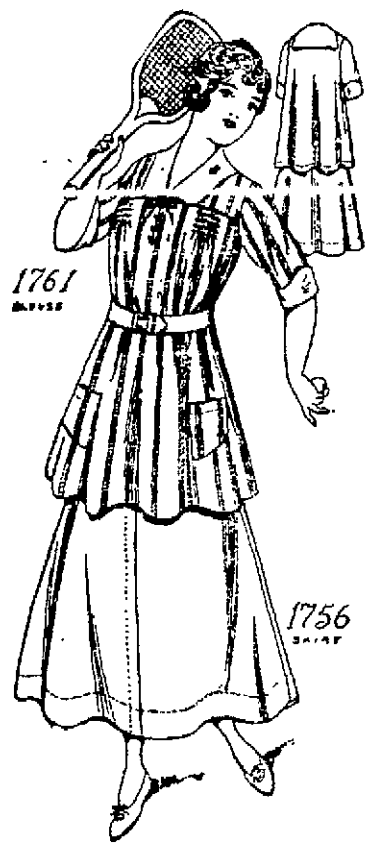

Aldermen Crane, Smith, McKittrick and Brown were not present at the meeting.

The ordinance was adopted.

The ordinance was printed in full in The Freeman October 4. Among the amendments to the existing ordinance the new ordinance prohibits the use of glaring headlights in the city, and prohibits a vehicle being left standing within ten feet of a fire hydrant. Several other changes are also made.

The ordinance will be printed twice as an advertisement in the official city papers.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Jaunty Sport Costume.

PIERRE'S DECISION

A Story Showing That Love Is Stronger Than Patriotism.

By LEON GARNIER

During the early part of the European war the French sent troops into Alsace with a view to reclaiming that province from German rule. At that time the fighting had not settled into trench warfare and the opposing armies were driving each other, sometimes the French getting the better of the Germans and sometimes the Germans defeating the French.

Now, the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, lying between France and Germany, have always been a bone of contention between the two countries. Sometimes they have been occupied by Germans, sometimes by French. In medieval times Germans settled there. The population is part German and part French.

This is the great war between the central and allied powers engendered conditions something like those existing during our war between the states, when there was a large sprinkling of Union sentiment among the Confederates. In Alsace and Lorraine the French, after more than forty years of German rule, are still loyal to France. Naturally the German population prefer to be ruled by the German government.

One September afternoon Clochette Dubois, a young French girl, dwelling in the southern part of Alsace, hearing a clatter of horses' hoofs and their riders' side arms on the road, ran to a window, to see a German officer, attended by his staff, ride up to the house, dismount, and, leaving his horse with an orderly, come through the gateway and up to the porch. Clochette paled, caught her breath and shuddered. Then in response to a loud knock she summoned what courage there was in her, went to the door and opened it.

A man in the uniform of a general stepped inside, saying: "I shall need this house for a few hours. Show me into a room that I can use for a conference."

Clochette led the way to the living room, and the general directed her to clear a table for him. One of his staff produced maps, and, spreading them out before the general, the two were soon deep in conversation. In the meantime the orderly who had ridden up to the house, dismounted and entered the house, followed by another and another, each armed with a sword.

It would have been easy for any one less ignorant of the situation than Clochette to have indicated a small room of convenience. As soon as the general entered the house, he was followed by a number of soldiers, and he would not have been able to find a room in which to hold a conference.

Clochette, having recovered from her fright, and seeing that the coming of the Germans had nothing to do with her father, she went to a room above, where her mother was confined on account of illness, she told her what was going on below.

"I am holding a war council," said the general. "Can you not find some way to listen to what they say? If you can you may be able to bring us to restore Alsace to France."

These few words worked a great change in Clochette. She went into a bedroom directly over the one being used by the general and listened. But the doors were too thick to permit any sound except a dull confusion of voices to reach her. Groggily downstairs she entered the kitchen with a view to listen at a door that opened from it to the room in which the council was being held. But she found a guard there too. Descending to the cellar, she stood on a box, bringing her ear near to the floor above. But the house was well built and all the floors too thick to transmit sound.

Clochette, being balked, turned to go up to the floor above, when she heard the living room door open and the tread of boots in the hall. When she reached the kitchen the generals were mounting their horses in the yard. As soon as the last one had ridden away Clochette went into the room where they had held their conference and looked about her. She detected the odor of burning paper, but when she came she could not tell. There was a stove in the room, but the season was not far enough advanced for a fire. Passing this stove the girl felt a slight warmth. She opened the door and looked in. There were the ashes of burned paper, which still retained some heat. There were a few scraps that had not been burned. Clochette took them out and examined them. There was nothing intelligible on any of them except one which was half burned. It read:

attacks the French. soon as he rolls it up against their center. The first given way.

Clochette took this fragment to her mother, who examined it critically. It was evidently a part of a memorandum of a plan of attack, but when or where there was no record. Nevertheless it was evidently of great importance, and possibly a French officer might supply the missing portion.

"Go at once with it, Clochette," said Mme. Dubois. "To the French commander. You know where the troops are. As soon as you reach them ask them to take you to their general. Tell him of the conference held in our house and where you found the paper: which you will give him."

Clochette at once put on a hat and a wrap and rushed forth. There was no pocket in her dress, and she carried the scrap of paper in her hand. Directly opposite the Dubois home lived a German family. One of the girls, Gretchen, was at a window when she saw Clochette come out, tightly grasping a paper in her hand, and hurry away. Gretchen had seen the general's ride up to the Dubois home, and since they came from different points she had inferred that they had met there for a purpose. When she saw Clochette emerge so hastily with the paper in her hand it flashed upon her that Clochette had become possessed of information of the German movements and was taking it to the French commander.

It happened that these two girls were interested in the same man. Pierre Wentzel was the son of a German Alsatian and a Frenchwoman. Pierre had been born twenty years after the cessation of the province to Germany, and, his parentage being divided between German and French, he cared little whether he lived under the rule of a president or a kaiser. As to the two girls who were interested in him, he had not shown a decided preference for either.

Gretchen was not only interested in balking Clochette's move from patriotic motives, but from a feeling of antagonism due to rivalry. On seeing the French girl hurry away Gretchen snatched up a hat and coat and ran after her. Keeping behind her, Gretchen soon saw that she was making toward the French army. Gretchen was about to catch up with her rival, with a view to prevent her taking the supposed information to the French commander, when who should appear on the scene to complicate matters but Pierre Wentzel. He emerged from a crossroad and met Clochette at the crossing while Gretchen was still at some distance behind. Wentzel joined Clochette and walked on beside her.

The girls had each been working on Wentzel, the one to make him a Frenchman, the other a German, but thus far neither had succeeded. The fact that Clochette was doubtless bringing to the French headquarters with information that might lead to a German defeat was sufficient in itself, but that Wentzel should be a party to the act was maddening. Indeed, it was too much for Gretchen. She hurried on and overtook the others. Not being in a mood to act diplomatically, she spoke at random.

"What have you in your hand?" she asked of Clochette.

Clochette made no other reply than to look at her rival defiantly.

"I saw the general go into your house. That paper you hold so tightly is information you obtained by eavesdropping, and you are carrying it to the French army. Pierre, take it from her!"

"Why should I do that?" asked Pierre.

"Because your father was a German and you should be loyal to the kaiser!"

"I am neither loyal to the kaiser nor to the president. If Clochette has a paper it is hers, not mine nor yours, and I see no reason why she should be compelled to give it up."

"If you permit her to carry that information to the French army," cried Gretchen, "you need not consider me your friend any more!"

Pierre stood irresolute. He was not ready to take choice between the two girls.

"I do not fear," said Clochette, "that Pierre will rob me of anything I have in my possession."

"Clochette," he said, "I fear that if you go to the front you may be shot."

"That is what I want," was the reply. "You had better give me the paper."

"Do I understand you to demand it of me because Gretchen commands you to do so on pain of being dismissed by her?"

"Not exactly," stammered Pierre. Meanwhile firing was heard at the front, and missiles began to spit about the trio. At this point a spent bullet struck Clochette's hand, and the paper tumbled to the ground. While Clochette was grasping the empty gloves, Gretchen stooped and picked up the paper. As soon as Clochette saw that her rival possessed her treasure she said to Pierre:

"Gretchen called upon you to decide between us when I had the paper. Now I call upon you to do so. And you must decide, too, between France and Germany. Take it to the Germans or to the French, whichever you like. If to the Germans, you need never communicate with me again; if to the French, I shall love you forever."

Pierre looked from one girl to the other several times. Presently it was plain that he had made up his mind.

"Give me the paper," he said to Gretchen.

"What do you intend to do with it?" asked Gretchen.

"I intend to decide between you and Clochette."

EDDIE HART
TIGERS BOOK UP UNDER DRIVING OF HART.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 9.—Eddie Hart was asked to change the rather timid Princeton football aggregation into a team of bearcats, and it rather looks as if he would do it. The team has shown considerable improvement under Hart's coaching, and it is hoped that he will be able to make something out of the eleven.

Hart, big and aggressive, has the faculty of being able to impart energy to others and from all present indications he has imparted considerable energy to the Tigers.

The Lamp of Experience.

It is natural to man to indulge in the illusions of hope. We are apt to shut our eyes against a painful truth and listen to the song of that siren till she transforms us into beasts.

Are we disposed to be of the number of those who, having eyes, see not, and, having ears, hear not the things which so nearly concern their temporal salvation? For my part, whatever anguish of spirit it may cost, I am willing to know the whole truth, to know the worst and provide for it.

I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience. I know of no way of judging of the future but by the past.—Patrick Henry.

Big Friday and Saturday Sale

This is one of the most important Millinery Sales of the season. It is important not only in the character of the merchandise, in the variety of the fashionable styles, but in the large savings that may be effected. And for the woman who insists upon trimming her own millinery Friday and Saturday will be harvest days.

The price reductions are bona fide. They are drastic and sweeping in character—unparalleled in Kingston for moderation and daring. Involved are smart Hats which are not over-burdened to the point of offending good taste in the shapes or trimmings—Hats whose picturesqueness is attained by many novel, effective and entirely new features which must be seen to receive the appreciation that is certainly their due.

HUGHES LED ALL IN ULSTER VOTE

Republican Candidate for President Received 10,649 and District Attorney Traver Only 200 Behind That Figure—Traver's Majority Breaks All Records.

The largest vote in Ulster county on Tuesday for any candidate was for Charles E. Hughes for president, Mr. Hughes receiving 10,649 votes, against 7,750 votes for President Wilson, which gave Mr. Hughes a plurality in the county of 2,899.

The next highest vote given for any candidate for office was for Frederick G. Traver for district attorney, who received 10,449 votes, just two hundred less than the number cast for Hughes. Milton O. Auchmoody, his opponent, received 10,249 votes, which gives District Attorney Traver a majority of 4,974—just a little less than five thousand, and the largest majority ever given in Ulster county for any office.

Next to District Attorney Traver, the largest plurality was that given for State Comptroller Edwin J. Travis, whose plurality was 4,247. District Attorney Traver's majority beat that by 687. Mr. Traver's vote was 417 greater than the vote for Governor Whitman, his majority was 1,977 greater than the governor's plurality and 2,105 greater than the plurality for Mr. Hughes.

Governor Whitman came third in the number of votes cast, the total vote for him being 10,032, against 7,036 cast for Judge Seabury, giving the governor a plurality of 2,996.

The Sunken Treasure

Modern Engineering Skill Recovers Long Buried Gold

By CHARLES S. PEASE

"I tell you there is $75,000 down twenty-five feet in the mud of the river bottom in a place I know about, but in fifty years I have not been able to find a man with nerve enough to go after it."

Old Packard was babbling his one story—the only thing he thought about. Nobody believed the poor old lecher. They only laughed at him. All the bangers on around the station post-office thought him a harmless lunatic or at least that he was cracked on the subject of buried treasure.

But one afternoon there happened to be a young engineer on the platform waiting to take a train who had heard fragments of Packard's story before, and the idea struck him that he would go to the bottom of the story, if not to the bottom of the river.

"Look here, Packard," he said; "you stay at home tomorrow night and I'll come down to your place and we will go over your story."

"All right," replied the old man. "I'll be on the lookout for you; but, understand you'll have to play fair with me."

Early the next evening the engineer made his way to the poor old shack down by the bank of the Missouri river where Packard lived.

"Mr. Packard, my name is Grover—John D. Grover. I am an engineer. I have just opened an office in Omaha. I have heard enough of the $75,000 in the sunken steamboat to want to know all about it. Tell me the whole story."

"Why should you want to know?" quizzed the old man doubtfully, hugging the secret of many years.

"Because if all I suspect you know can be made clear to me I believe I have a means of getting that treasure without much trouble or expense. I will play fair with you if you will with me. If we are successful we will square the cost and you and I divide fifty and fifty. I'll bank my wits and the surer against your information. I am interested in this thing in two ways—I need money and I want to try out an invention I have heard about."

Old Packard's eyes twinkled with excitement as he stuck out his horny hand to Grover.

"I've been waiting for you for fifty years. You are the first and only man I have met who has shown any intelligence and sand about digging up the old General Fremont. I am the only man living who knows where that boat lies buried, how deep and what's ailed her. Here goes for the whole story. I'll trust you."

"In the summer of 1854 I was one of the cut pilots on the General. We started away from St. Louis in the early spring, bound for Fort Benton, Mont., and intermediate government posts along the Missouri river. We had a miscellaneous cargo aboard of ordinance and general supplies. In the strong room was $75,000 in gold for the pay of officers and soldiers."

"All went well enough until after we had passed old St. Mary's and were making a crossing in pretty shallow water. As bad luck would have it, a snag popped its nose up as we were bucking the current under a full head of steam and smashed a great hole in our bow. The lurch of water put the fires out at once, and we drifted back into the next pool, where the General sank in twenty-five feet of depth, bringing the Big Muddy level with the Texas. On this deck were plenty of boats, and no one wanted to stop long with the river sucking and pulling at the old General. So we quit and landed at Nebraska City with the clothes on our backs, that was all."

"I was in the pilot house when the General touched bottom, and the first thing that passed through my mind was

"Some time I'm going to hoist out that gold." I caught two rances at right angles as we bumped the river bed, and I am confident that the bulk is right where I left it. There was a lot of heavy stuff on board to be dived, and on top of that the river would fill up every nook and cranny in a few minutes. Of course the stream would soon strip the upper works right down to the hull. In fact, the pilot house and other stuff kept us company as far as we went."

"In 1860 a cut-off occurred near the Iowa bluffs and left the bulk three miles back in the country. The bend silted up long ago, and now there are fifteen inch cottonwoods growing above the grave of the General.

"That's the story, young man, and will you be good enough to tell me how in thunder you are going to get down twenty-five feet in quicksand? You cannot dig quicksand like plain dirt. It runs like water. You might as well try to bale out the Missouri river or the Atlantic ocean for that matter. That's the question. There is no known way of fluking a pit in quicksand."

"It's simple enough as soon as you know how," said Grover, laughing. "It's going to take a little money and some machinery, but I believe I very soon can raise all the help we need. Tomorrow morning we will drop in and see a lawyer and settle our matters of partnership in this enterprise, and then we will go to the fire plant. I know the president there, and I have a promise from him to see me through with any legitimate undertaking."

It was not so easy to get the millionaire lecher to take any work in a treasure hunt. It was not, he said, so much the amount of money involved, because that wasn't much, but he hated to be mixed up in any scheme that looked fishy. This buried treasure chase would get around and hurt his standing, he thought.

"Suppose we leave it this way," proposed Grover—"Packard and I will make a set of soundings and explore the ground thoroughly. If we find the old boat where he says she is we'll see what you think about the matter then."

"All right, Grover; you find the boat, and I will come pretty near underwriting this enterprise. My opinion is that you will find nothing stronger than good rich Missouri bottom mud."

"All right, sir," said Grover cheerfully. "I know you are from Missouri and if I am not able to 'show you' all bets are off."

"Come on, Packard," called Grover, whirling on his heels. "Let's get busy!"

The next morning found Grover and Packard on the way to the scene of operations in a buckboard with a lot of stuff the young man had borrowed from the local government engineer. For five miles they followed the river road and then struck off over a wagon trail through the brush toward the bluffs.

"I can find my way to the place in the dark," said the old man, all excitement. "We will be on the ground in three minutes."

"There, do you see that curving ridge in front of us? That's the bulk of the old boat, now all filled in with the overflow of mud from the river. Here is the stake at the intersection of the two ranges. You can gamble that the old General is right under us this minute and the 'yellow boys' as good as they were when put aboard in '54."

"Now show me the ranges," said Grover. "They are of the utmost importance."

"One," showed Packard. "Is the line through that point of rock above the railroad cut and the gap in the bluffs back of St. Mary's. Do you get that?"

"Yes," said Grover. "And the other?"

"The other range is not quite so good. It's the head of that bend on the lower bank, on line with the high point of the bluff beyond. Do you catch it?"

"I have it such as it is," said Grover, "and we will get right on the job and see if we can punch the General the first crack."

Grover produced a bunch of steel sounding rods from the wagon, and carefully plumbing one had Packard hold it perpendicular at the stake, while with a few blows of a maul he sank it level with the ground.

AT LAST THE PILE OF PRECIOUS BOXES WAS LIFTED TO THE SURFACE.

gangs of men, there was accomplished a light cofferdam of frozen mud three feet thick and thirty-five feet deep, in the center of which lay the object of all these efforts. With the brine pump going continuously to maintain the frozen walls, a derrick was rigged and the material inside the cofferdam removed. Finally the blackened deck planks of the old boat appeared, and old Packard was lowered into the excavation to make the first chips fly.

He soon gave way to younger men, who worked in relays for hours before they got the better of the stout beams and planking. As was to be supposed, they came upon a chamber solid full of mud, but it was a great day when at last the pile of precious rope bound boxes were discovered and lifted to the surface.

All were carried under guard to the ice plant and opened. The coils were embedded in black mud and tarnished, but just as valuable as the day they were mined. There was even more in the find than Packard had said.

After paying all expenses Grover and Packard divided a little over $50,000 between them, and the partnership was dissolved by mutual consent.

With his capital Grover made a good start as a contractor, and old Packard braced up and wore good clothes and advocated temperance. His chief pleasure was taken in recounting the story of the General Fremont, always topping off with, "Didn't I tell you so?"

Origin of the Word "Cassare."
The word "cassare" is derived from the French word cascade, which has come into the Spanish word cascada and the Portuguese cascata. All these are derived from the Italian cascata, a waterfall, from the verb cascade, to fall. This verb is apparently associated in thought with the Latin cadere, past participle casus, to fall, but it is probably like the Spanish cascar, to break in pieces, beat, strike, and the Portuguese cascar to strike an extension of the Latin verb cassare, cassare. Now cassare or cassare is a variant of quassare, to shake, shatter, shiver and frequently of quater, past participle quassum, meaning to shake. Thus the word cascade has a distant relationship to such words as quash and discuss. The root idea was apparently not so much that of a fall of water as of water shattered prettily on the rocks below.—New York Sun.

The Peculiar Sand Fly.
The sand fly is perfectly harmless. It does not bite. It has no sting. It cannot even eat. The sand fly is known to scientists familiarly as the May fly. In scientific terms it is called ephemera, from the Greek word ephemeros, which means lasting only for a day. To the scientists the sand fly is one of the most interesting of insects. The fly lives but a day at most, but before it sees the light it has lived from one to three years under the water in the form of what the scientists call a nymph. The nymph can both walk and swim. As it grows it molts, and after about the ninth molt tiny wings appear on its thorax. These grow larger until the insect comes forth from the water a sand fly. It then has but one duty to lay its eggs. This done, the sand fly zigzags through the air and its brief life is ended.

It took a good deal of argument to persuade the big lecher to make the journey to the "job," but one day when Grover managed to get him down there and explained the whole scheme he became as enthusiastic as the others and offered to back the work to the limit.

On that the real work of raising the gold began, and this is how it was done. First, a circle was laid out on the ground covering the position of the strong room. Then inch and a half pipes, coupled up in proper lengths to reach the hull or to go past it at the side, were forced down through soil, mud and quicksand, making something like a circular iron fence. Outside this, another and another ring of pipes, standing upright like the first, making in all three concentric iron pipe fences surrounding the strong room.

These pipes were bored at their lower ends, and the upper ends had a special fixture upon them, so that a small inside pipe could be inserted for the full length of the larger tube and all the pipes connected up in series. The object of this was to provide a continuous course for the flow of a freezing mixture to be pumped up and down, up and down throughout the

COLOSSAL CLOCKS.
The World's Four Largest Ones Are in This Country.
A factory clock in Jersey City, N. J., is the largest in the world. Time can be read with the naked eye at a distance of three miles. The face of the clock is thirty-eight feet in diameter, the minute spaces are two feet apart; the minute hand is twenty feet long and weighs one-third of a ton.

The second largest clock in the world was built for an electric illuminating company in Boston. Specifications: Dial, thirty-four feet in diameter; weight of hands, 875 pounds; hour hand, fourteen feet four inches long; minute hand, eighteen feet six inches long.

The next two largest clocks are the Metropolitan tower, New York city, dial twenty-six and one-half feet in diameter; city hall, Philadelphia, dial twenty-five feet in diameter.

At the top of 360 steps, in the clock tower at Westminster, Big Ben has marked time for London for over fifty years. The clock has four faces, each twenty-three feet across. The minute hands are fourteen feet long. The pendulum weighs nearly 450 pounds. The figures on the face are each two feet long, and the minute spaces are a foot square.

Silver of the Georgian Era.
The appreciation of the work of the era of George II. and George III. was illustrated by an auction sale which I attended the other day in London. A small mustard pot, very simple and elegant and slightly battered, was among the lots. It would have been passed over by most eyes, but it bore a hall-mark of George II's time, and the dealers bid eagerly enough for its possession until it fell to an offer of 3 guineas an ounce. That there are still possibilities of appreciation in silver, however, was shown by the price given for a pair of old spoons of an unusual elegance and not in the best condition. They were dated 1613, and they brought £10 an ounce.—Westminster Gazette.

Force of Habit.
"It's curious how habits fasten themselves on people. You know Wapplesley?"

"Yes."

"He's an enthusiastic fisherman and always has a story to tell about some gigantic monster of the deep that he almost caught."

"I've heard him tell a lot of lies of that kind."

"Well, it seems that burglars broke into his house the other night, and he got up and captured one of them—a little fellow—but you ought to hear him tell about the size of the one that got away."

An Optimist.
"You say Gadsby is an optimist?"

"Unquestionably."

"What makes you think so?"

"Gadsby has never been able to earn more than $50 a week, yet he feels greatly encouraged every time he hears there is a demand for $10,000 a year men."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Situation.
"Is the world getting better?"

"Maybe so as a general proposition, but what good does it do me? My boss is just as grouchy, my janitor just as mean and the neighborhood kids quite as pestiferous."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

SUCCESS IN LIFE.
Put Business Before Pleasure Until You Have Reached the Top.
In an article called "Succeeding With What You Have" in the American Magazine Charles M. Seabury says: "I have always felt that the surest way to qualify for the job just ahead is to work a little harder than any one else on the job one is holding down. One of the most successful men I have known never carried a watch until he began to earn $10,000 a year. Before that he had managed with a nickel alarm clock in his bedroom, which he never forgot to wind."

"Young men may enjoy dropping their work at 5 or 6 o'clock and slipping into a dress suit for an evening of pleasure, but the habit has certain drawbacks. I happen to know several able-bodied gentlemen who got it so completely that now they are spending all their time, days as well as evenings, in dress suits, serving food in fashionable restaurants to men who did not get the dress suit habit until somewhat later in life."

"Recently we have heard much about investments. To my mind the best investment a young man starting out in business can possibly make is to give all his time, all his energies, to work—just plain, hard work. After a man's position is assured he can indulge in pleasure if he wishes. He will have lost nothing by waiting—and gained much. He will have made money enough really to afford to spend some, and he will know that he has done his duty by himself and by the world."

Tricky Husband.
Mr. Househunter (to real estate agent)—Mrs. Househunter will be in today, and I want you to tell her that the house we've been looking at is let.

Agent—Why—er—but it isn't.

Mr. Househunter—Well, it will be, for I'm taking it now. My wife can't make up her mind, but she'll want it badly as soon as she thinks she can't have it.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

Princess Leopold of Bavaria.

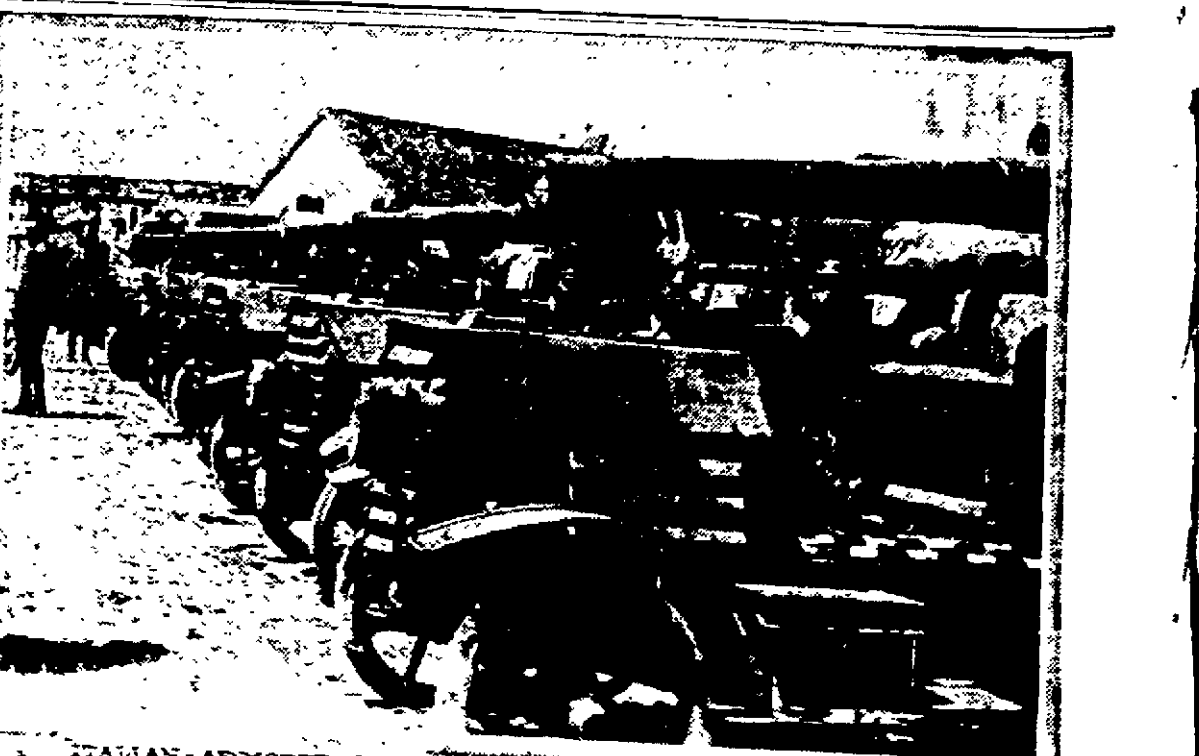

BAVARIAN PRINCE MAY BECOME KING OF POLAND.

Genera, Nov. 9.—Simultaneous with the proclamation in Warsaw and Lublin of the granting of political freedom to Poland and the establishment of a Polish Kingdom, it was reported here that Prince Leopold of Bavaria, commander of the Teutonic forces in Russia, may ascend the ancient throne of the Poles.

It was said that the Emperor of Austria wishes to place an Austrian prince upon the Polish throne, but that the Kaiser held out for a German, with the result that Prince Leopold was finally settled upon. In the meantime, pending the placing of a king upon the throne, General von Bessler, who for a time was military governor of Poland, will remain as governor general of Poland.

BOTH COMMITTEES CLAIM CALIFORNIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
San Francisco, Nov. 9.—The Republican state central committee, late this afternoon, is optimistic over the possible outcome of the election. The statement was made from committee headquarters that the Hughes outlook was becoming more and more encouraging with the advice received from southern California, showing Hughes gains all the time. At the Democratic state headquarters optimism ruled and the committee claims California for Wilson safely.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Nov. 9.—After irregularity in the initial trading on the stock exchange today the market developed a strong tone and after the end of the first fifteen minutes nearly all the active issues were established at materially higher prices. Most interest was attached to the trading in the marine issues, with the preferred advancing 4 1/2 points to 123 1/2, and the common 1 1/2 to 45. Trading in Steel Common was on a large scale, first sales being recorded at 12,000 shares, from 122 1/2 to 123, a net loss of 1 1/2 points from yesterday's closing, but within the next few minutes the stock was strong and ranged around 123 1/2. There was urgent buying again of Central Leather. Many of the low priced issues, including Allis-Chalmers and Southern Railway, were in good demand and made material gains. The copper stocks were also active and strong with Anaconda advancing a point to 98 and fractional gains were made in Utah Copper, Nevada Consolidated and Inspiration. Crucible Steel rose 1 1/2 points to 93 1/2, Republic Iron and Steel 3/4 to 7 3/4 and Sloss-Sheffield 3/4 to 80.

Unsettled again prevailed in the late forenoon, caused by reports of political developments, and many issues declined from one to two points, under general selling. The industrial were among the weakest features. The railway and copper stocks were also heavy. Money loaning at 2 1/2 per cent.

Many issues were in brisk demand in the late afternoon, with most interest attached to the trading in Central Leather, which rose to a new high record of 118, a gain of 10 1/2 points for the day. International Paper rose 1 to 70. Lackawanna Steel advanced to 95 1/2 and American Locomotive to 95. Steel Common jumped to 125, from which it reacted to 124 1/2.

The market closed strong. The market maintained a strong tone all through the last hour, although there were some recessions in the leading issues from the high levels of the afternoon. Steel Common, after selling above 125, declined about a point and Central Leather, after advancing to above 118, also reacted a point. Rallies quickly followed recessions, however, and many stocks at the close showed a net gain for the day of from 3 to 10 points. Government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

4 YEAR OLD GIRL BADLY INJURED

In Clay Bank at Brigham Brothers' Yard at East Kingston—is at the Kingston City Hospital.

Josephine, 4 years old, daughter of Charles Jones, a negro, employed on Brigham Brothers' brickyard at East Kingston, was badly injured Wednesday afternoon and removed to the Kingston City Hospital. It seems that the little tot had wandered over to the clay bank where she stumbled over a wire and her right hand got caught in a pulley block, tearing off two fingers. She also sustained a double fracture of the jaw and a fractured shoulder and minor injuries. She was resting as comfortably as could be expected today at the hospital.

Stewart Was Celebrating.

George Stewart, 35 years old, a stranger, was arrested on Wednesday afternoon by Policeman Walsh on a charge of public intoxication. George said this morning he had been celebrating election and pleaded hard for another chance, stating he had a job waiting him at Sanger's. Recorder Lang gave him an hour to get out of town.

OPPENHEIMER BROS.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Nov. 9.—Ted Jones, of Yale, uttered truth, when he said:

"The only way to break up that forward pass attack of Washington & Jefferson is to oppose him with a team of acrobats that are from eight to ten feet tall."

No team in America can use the aerial play with the uncanny perfection of those W. & J. men. They are the standards by which all other forward passers must be judged. They are absolute masters of it, and handle it in a way that almost defies its checking.

W. & J. attempted 58 such plays in that game with Yale a week or so ago and 30 were successful. Only two or three times were the alert Yale men able to intercept the remarkable "pitching" of Lloyd McCright, the W. & J. fullback. W. & J., on its 30 completed tosses, gained something like 300 yards—a single game record for ball advancement by forward passing that may endure for years to come.

"Never saw anything in my life like that air attack of W. & J.," declared Jones, after the W. & J.-Yale game was over. "The way those Pennsylvania boys handled that ball was baffling. Our men tried to stop it—but they were helpless. We had built up what we thought was a sure defense for that play—and W. & J. made forward passes at will."

Metzger Perfects Pass.

Bob Folwell was W. & J.'s first tutor in the forward pass. Bob believed implicitly in the short pass and rarely varied it with a long throw. Folwell's pass was to a point just a few yards beyond the scrimmage line, and went into the scolding mass of battling players. Metzger, however, mixes up his passes, and therein lies the beauty of W. & J.'s 1916 "sky" attack. The enemy, after a time, would check the Folwell short-pass because they knew that invariably it would be made into the line. But they can't do it with Metzger's, because Sol's play "crosses" them.

Most teams use only two or three men on the receiving end of the play. Sooner or later the opposition learns the identity of those men and they "cover" them every time a play is started. As a result the forward passes by other teams have not been extremely successful. But Metzger has schooled each and every one of his men in the snatching of the ball. And each and every one is used on one time or another during a game.

At the moment the ball is passed, the W. & J. players break through the opposition line and run as far into foreign territory as possible. Then it is up to McCright to determine which man is at least a few yards ahead of the rest. That is the man to whom McCright makes the pass, be he an end, a halfback, guard center or tackle. When the center snaps back the ball no one—not even McCright—knows to whom the ball eventually will go. No wonder it is an "unfathomable" play.

Sometimes McCright makes a 30 yard throw to a player near the sidelines. The next time they throw may be to a W. & J. man 20 feet beyond near midfield. Or McCright may "cross" the enemy by making a short throw to a man who is standing just a few feet ahead of the scrimmage line. He does not operate on schedule; he throws long ones and short ones; into the scrimmage line or far beyond it; and his "mixing" of the tosses is one of the biggest factors in its success.

McCright a Master Passer.

To watch McCright handling the ball, is worth the price of admission to any game in which he figures. He stands from 10 to 20 yards behind the line, realizing that he must have that much leeway because when the ball is snapped, his line at once quits guarding and devotes its energies to getting into position to take the McCright throw. Calmly, coolly, McCright stands there, with the ball in his hand, waiting until he can determine which of his men is least covered. And then, with the control and almost the speed that Walter Johnson exhibits with a baseball, McCright makes the throw. It is a mystery, how a fellow, with hands as small as McCright's, can so grasp the pickles as to perfectly guide its course.

Those who saw the Yale-W. & J. game which was won by the Bull dogs, 36 to 14, are a unit in declaring that had W. & J. opened with its forward pass, the result would have been vastly different. But W. & J. elected, during almost all of the first half, to use every other offensive play but its remarkable ground game. In the second half, W. & J. actually started its forward passing—and Yale was bewildered. The light Pennsylvania eleven, on successive "skyline" plays, moved the ball up and down the field as it pleased Yale tried desperately—but vainly—to stop it. But with monotonous regularity, McCright threw the ball and a W. & J. man grabbed it for a long gain. And so it went.

Once W. & J. got the ball on its own 40 yard line and in four passes by McCright, had carried it across the Yale goal line for a touchdown. It was remarkable—and more.

PROF. CHANDLER EXPERT ON FRUIT

No Swivel Chair Investigator is the Head of Cornell Department of Pomology, Who Does His Overalls in Orchard—To Speak on Wednesday.

PROF. W. H. CHANDLER.

Professor Chandler was born on a farm in the western part of Missouri. As a boy he was typical of his state, in that he was of the "show me" type.

Through his perseverance he secured a thorough demonstration and discussion of horticultural matters, and so successfully absorbed and classified this knowledge that he has won a place as one of the foremost horticulturists and investigators in the United States.

He availed himself of the first opportunity to attend a college of agriculture at Columbia, Missouri. After finishing his course in this institution in 1905, he was appointed as instructor, during which time he worked and secured in one year his degree of Master of Science in Agriculture. A year or so later he became Professor of Horticulture at the University of Missouri. He held this position until 1913, when he was called to Cornell as Professor of Research in Pomology.

When Professor C. S. Wilson became Commissioner of Agriculture of New York state in 1910, Professor Chandler was placed at the head of the Pomology department, the position which he now fills very creditably.

Professor Chandler is not one of those theoretical office desk, knuckle investigators. When he wants to find out something about horticulture he puts on his overalls and goes out into the orchard after it himself.

He has given rather an exhaustive study of the question of winter killing and hardiness in fruit. He has carried on extensive experiments with pruning and fertilizing which are still under way on the large Pomology plots at Cornell. He has delved into the problem of co-operation among fruit growers. His ideas on this subject are available in bulletin form.

Professor Chandler will speak to us on Wednesday, November 15, at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on the subject, "Future Prospects of Fruit Growing in New York State."

Should We Plant or Pull Out? Hear what this authority has to say on this subject.

Come and get acquainted with Professor Chandler. He will be an inspiration and a help to you.

PORT EWEN.

Port Even, Nov. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. George Houghtaling of Long Branch, N. J., who have been the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Houghtaling, on Salem street, are spending some time with Mrs. Houghtaling's mother, Mrs. G. Byck, at Tannersville, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Frisbee, Miss Nina Frisbee and Mr. and Mrs. William Hall of Andes called on the Rev. and Mrs. Eugene A. Bookbout at the Methodist parsonage and Mrs. S. Emma Burger on Broadway Tuesday.

Prayer services will be held in the Reformed and Methodist Churches this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Edward Elsworth of Salem street fell off his bicycle Tuesday afternoon while riding with other boys on South Broadway and hit his head. He is quite badly hurt. Dr. G. W. Ross is the attending physician.

Miss Mary Carpenter, who has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Alonzo Terpening, on Hasbrouck street, has returned to her home in New York city.

Keep in mind the annual harvest festival to be held in the Methodist chapel Tuesday, November 14. Supper served from 5:30 to 8 o'clock. Entertainment at 8 in auditorium.

A meeting was held at the home of George Shultis on Broadway Wednesday evening to elect the officers of the adult Bible class. (The Truth Seekers), in the Methodist Sunday school. President, Mrs. Edward H. Busch; vice president, John Lyan; secretary, Mrs. Ernest Hutchings; assistant secretary, Samuel P. Tiana; treasurer, Mrs. John Halliday; librarian, Mrs. Benjamin Wells; teacher, Mrs. E. A. Bookbout; assistant teacher, Benjamin Wells. After the officers were elected a social hour was spent and dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. George W. Shultis.

FOR PREVENTION OF TUBERCULOSIS

Ulster County Battle Being Waged in Efficient Fashion According to Reports Made at Meeting of Committee—Mr. Nelbach in City.

The regular meeting of the executive council of the Ulster county committee on the prevention of tuberculosis, which was held in the office of the president, the Hon. Joseph M. Fowler, on Wednesday afternoon, had as its guest and adviser, George J. Nelbach of the State Charities Aid Association, the tuberculosis department. According to the reports given and business transaction, the fight against tuberculosis in our county is being waged with earnestness and efficiency.

The meeting was presided over by the chairman, Mr. Fowler, and following the secretary's report as given by Dr. Mary Gage-Day, the report of the tuberculosis visiting nurse, Miss Anna O'Shea, was read and was as follows:

Report of work from May 16 to the present time.

Kingston City—
Total number of inspections, 385
Total number of house inspections, 224
At this date Kingston has 48 reported cases, of which number 17 are at the county hospital.

The living cases outside the city, in Ulster county, reported are:

Wawarsing township	7
Ellenville village	5
Woodstock township not yet completed.

The county cases who are at the county hospital are numbered as city cases.

All suspicious cases in the city and county have been investigated and reported as either positive or negative.

All towns and villages have been visited and with a few exceptions all of the cases have been visited at the request of physicians. In a few cases the patients were not at home when the visit was made.

The total number of cases reported in Ulster county up to date are:

Kingston city, 48
Ulster county townships and villages, 61
(Woodstock not included)

(Signed) ANNA M. O'SHEA.
It was further stated that Health Officer Johnston was especially well pleased with the work already accomplished by Miss O'Shea, in that the local board of health finds itself better informed today than ever before regarding the tuberculosis condition in the city. More patients have been persuaded to go to the Tuberculosis Hospital, and at one time this summer there was a waiting list for patients at the hospital.

On having their attention called to the new provision of the sanitary code, regarding the reporting of cases, it was voted that whenever the nurse finds a suspicious case, not already reported by a physician, she shall report the case in writing, signing her own name, to the health department, which according to this new provision, will then have a proper diagnosis made. This, it is hoped, will result in the finding and saving of incipient cases.

The matter of the most efficient and least expensive manner of doing the laundry work, especially the washing at the Tuberculosis Hospital came up for consideration, and it was voted to have a committee appointed to investigate the initial cost and cost of operation of electric washing machines, together with their advantages and disadvantages. The committee appointed consisted of Dr. Gates, Dr. Day and Mrs. Reed. Definite action was taken author-

FARMERS TO HEAR A CATTLE EXPERT

Prof. Wing, Head of Cornell Department of Animal Husbandry, on Program For Ulster Farm Bureau Meeting Next Week.

One of the men secured by the Ulster County Farm Bureau, for its fall two day meeting, November 14 and 15, is Professor H. H. Wing, the head of the animal husbandry department, at the New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

Professor Wing was born in New York state, November 29, 1859. He received a degree as bachelor of agriculture in 1881, and later was awarded the degree of master of agriculture.

During the years from 1882 to 1884 he was the assistant director of the New York experiment station. He removed to Nebraska where he was editor of the "Nebraska Farmer" from 1887 to 1888.

Returning to New York he served as professor of animal husbandry, and dairy husbandry from 1891 to 1903. These two branches of live stock development grew to such proportions that it became necessary to separate them, so that in 1903 Professor Wing was made the head of the animal husbandry department, at Cornell, which position he still holds. During this time his animal husbandry department has grown from a few workers, housed in the dairy building to a large department. The instruction staff, library and class rooms are now located in a large building devoted exclusively to animal husbandry. Connected with a herd of over 60 thoroughbred and high grade cows, made up of representatives from the leading breeds of Holstein-Friesian, Jersey, Guernsey, Shorthorn, Ayrshire. The department has also a purely bred Percheron and a purely bred Hackney stallion and a number of fine mares.

Professor Wing has the distinction as the head of an animal husbandry department of breeding seven 30 pound cows. No other college in the United States has bred more than two 30 pound cows, and there is only one that has bred two.

He established the famous "Glista Family" starting as all farmers usually are obliged to do from a poor cow. By carefully selecting and breeding, he developed a family containing four 30 pound cows, and a number of creditable milk producers. Professor Wing has a national reputation as a breeder and as a judge of cattle.

He will present something of vital interest to every one when he speaks at the fall meeting, November 15. An opportunity will be presented for our dairymen to have personal conferences with Professor Wing before the session closes.

MRS. RUSSELL EARL, YOUNG BRIDE ON HONEYMOON SHOOT BEAR.

New York, Nov. 9.—Three caribou, a grizzly bear, two wild sheep and three goats constitute the game bag of Mrs. Russell Ward Earl, a young Brooklyn bride on a honeymoon hunting expedition in British Columbia, according to word received from her by her friends here today. Before departing on her honeymoon Mrs. Earl had never fired a gun. Now she has developed into a most successful and fearless hunter in a part of which she is the only woman member.

"Julie" Used Up. Mildred, age four and a half years, and her brother, Bobbie, two and a half years, were pushing their rocking chairs over the floor, playing they were automobiles, honking and making noises imitating a machine, when Mildred, out of breath, was heard to exclaim: "Oh, Bobbie! Let's rest, I am out of gasoline!"
